

CRYSTAL CLEARING AND PROGRAMMING

This is a process for programming crystals that includes clearing the crystal before programming. It can also be used after someone else has worked with the crystal to clear their energy.

Programming Crystals

It is possible to program your crystals or other stones to hold a message, work for a specific purpose, to broadcast an affirmation, emotion or energy frequency, enhance protective filters, promote clear communication, deepen meditation and healing work and for an almost infinite number of other purposes. Before we had computers we sometimes called this process enchanting the stones. Your programs can be either autonomous or activatable. Autonomous programs either broadcast the program continuously or activate automatically when needed.

Activatable programmed stones are held and mentally activated by intention, request/command or when a pre-designated time or situation/condition occurs. Crystals programmed in answer to healing requests usually have autonomous programs. Programs for correcting bad habits such as smoking and programs for protection or improving an ambient atmosphere and for general manifestation or projecting affirmations are usually autonomous.

An activatable programmed crystal might be used for connecting with your high self, sending energy to someone in labor (programmed ahead to activate when labor begins) to deepen meditation or enhance sleep, to help your memory while taking a test or for any purpose that you do not need constantly.

Before you program a crystal for any purpose you should determine that the crystal agrees to and is in accord with your intended program. Some crystals have already got a firmly set memory and purpose. These stones are not appropriate to use for your own programs. While many people think of the word programming as meaning to impose your will on the stone, the first key and requirement for any kind of programming is that the crystal or stone be in agreement, that the stone chooses to accept a program or, in fact, invites you to work with it in that way. Any program should be in accord with the innate purpose and energy of the stone. You could call it asking or mutual attunement or even use the older term, enchantment. Never program a stone that does not choose to work with you in this way and for the purpose needed. The programming part is a way to connect the person with the particular natural energy and purpose of the stone or to fine-tune an affirmation. One does not have to program crystals unless you feel called to do so. It's just one possible way of helping to create a mutually beneficial relationship. You should have an intuitive sense that it is suitable to program the stone for what you intend before you do so.

After the crystal is cleared, hold the crystal in your hand or touch it if it is too large to hold. Open your mind to sense any intuitive information about the stone. You may or may not become aware of the Deva, the spirit or life force of the crystal, greet that essence as you would greet any other new friend and receive what impressions you can from the stone.

When you have gotten a sense of the stone (Do not be disappointed if at first these impressions are vague, practice will improve your ability to commune). Think about what you want to work with the stone for. Do you want it for general or specific healing, for protection, or to broadcast an affirmation? Examples are general healing, communication, protection, and so forth and specifically treat bad back, confidence at interview, shield from negative energy etc. When you have decided what you wish to use a crystal for, seek a crystal that feels like it is in accord with your intention. Ask the crystal if this is in accord with its current purpose and if it is willing to carry this program for you. You will probably get some sense of the crystals agreement or lack of it. If you do not you, will probably learn to sense the answer to these questions in time. A pendulum can be used to help discern the answer. if you don't have your intuition active yet. If you sense that the answer is no you might deepen your meditative communication and ask the crystal what it wants to do or what work it will do .Be open to receive an answer. Your intuitive communion with the stone may have already given you a sense of what purpose it is for.

If you do not get an answer set the stone aside and come back to it some other time. Most stones are probably best programmed for a general range of function such as healing rather than a very narrow range. Often if you have a lot of crystals you can just announce what you need a crystal for and you may sense an intuitive response from a crystal or will be attracted to a specific crystal or crystals which are in accord with your desired purpose. This process of choosing and meeting the stone and agreeing on the purpose is in some cases all that needs to be done. A verbal affirmation of the agreed upon purpose is normally made aloud in your own words . Once you become familiar with this process it can be done very swiftly.

For the following technique you may want to write your program out before hand. The rules for affirmations apply, keep it present tense and use positive words only. The universe ignores negative terms. Programmed crystals are not to be used for dishonest purposes. You cannot use a crystal to make someone love you. Action and results follow attention and thoughts, focus on the result you want.

The following is the technique has been found to be very effective and far simpler than many programming methods.

The Technique:

Once you have selected the right stone and sensed agreement. Ground and center yourself. Clarify your intention. Hold the stone in your dominant hand or in both hands. Large stones can be touched rather than held. Focus your intention on the stone. Clearly state in your mind or out loud what it is you are programming the stone for. Visualize the desired result as clearly as you can, if appropriate. To program a stone to broadcast an intention, prayer, desire, affirmation or healing energy you just intend that it do so. One to five minutes is the standard time to hold the focus, though it can be shorter. Continue until you feel that the crystal holds the program. Using reiki can also shorten the time. The program vibration is now set in the crystal. You may add an ending intention that the program is locked in and will stay until cleared. Some people breathe deeply and exhale strongly over the crystal while they focus on the program. Some people renew or refresh the programs from time to time. You can intend that it activate only when you hold it or when you call on or have it be constantly active depending on the purpose you are programming or dedicating it for. When you activate an activatable program You may find it more effective to hold the stone in your non-dominant hand to receive energy/messages from the crystal and in your dominant hand to program or to amplify sending a program or healing energy.

Stones do not have to be held to be activated. Stones programmed for a personal effect are usually carried or placed nearby under a pillow for dream programming. Stones that broadcast affirmations, manifestation programs or atmospherics such as a call to mental alertness or for calm can be set in a window or on a table or wherever it feels right that they will not be disturbed excessively.

I have read many books that state that how far a given crystal can project its program is directly related to its size. This has not been my experience at all. I have used small crystals for big programs quite often.

I strongly recommend programming a single terminated quartz crystal to help facilitate your connection and awareness of your high self and/or Guardian Angel and carrying it with you. You can hold this stone while meditating. You can also use a programmed stone to send/receive energy from your high self or Angels. Stones programmed for channeling High-self, Angels, or attuning you to harmony with Divine Will cannot usually be amplified or combined with other programs.

If you do not have a particular stone or crystal that you need for a particular purpose you can use a singly terminated quartz crystal and ask/intend that it be charged to act as the needed stone. Tumbled quartz stones will also work though sometimes the energy is felt in a more diffused way. Make sure that you clear any stone you are using as an energetic substitute when you are done with it. I always thank the stone after use.

Quartz crystal is most often used for programming. Most stones can be used but clear quartz is most versatile. Keep your programs in harmony with the natural energies, traditional uses, and your intuitive sense of the purpose of the stone. For example, program a loving stone like rose quartz for loving, calm peaceful purposes. Singly terminated quartz crystals are most often used though round crystals and other stones work quite well also.

It is quite important when programming a crystal by intention that you are quite clear and focused on just what it is that you do intend. You need to have your intention very clear and accurate. You might want to write down your proposed program first and before you program a stone or other object to promote a particular emotion, think it through carefully.

When I was first learning to program crystals I had a number of misfires which both demonstrated to me the effectiveness of crystal programming and the need to understand exactly what you are asking for, and to consider ramifications. I once charged a stone with the intention that it promote happiness in a large room and after a few days we all became very irritated at the constant happy energetic nagging. It was just not comfortable or natural. I also once programmed a stone to promote sleep in a bedroom and it was so effective that it was virtually impossible to do anything else at all in the room until the stone was cleared. My love life virtually disappeared. Even a plumber and a heater repairman were struggling to remain awake to their great puzzlement.

You also need to be very clear as to how your program might actually be interpreted. A program intended to help you see auras might instead help make your aura visible to others. You may also be surprised by some results. A stone programmed to assist with other being communication was too effective as I was flooded with information and emotions from animals, trees, insects and even a lawn. Programming a crystal for mental alertness and emotional clarity has not caused any difficulties so far. You want the programs to help, not overpower. These cautions apply even more strongly to programs for love etc. If in doubt don't do it!

Crystal programming is to be used only for good and in accord with your soul's purpose. You cannot and should not use these techniques to try to manipulate others.

When you wish to change the program of a crystal clear it before re-programming. Some people use tiny stickers to put a word or sign on a crystal so that they can remember what they programmed it for.

People often program a crystal to transmit a healing energy like Reiki. For this they run the energy while holding the intention that the crystal transmit the energy, usually to a particular person.

Most programs need to be in your own words, which is why I do not have a list of specific examples. It is traditional that most programs include the concept that the work be in accord with the highest good.

Charging with Ascended Master Melchizedek

Crystals can receive and hold thought forms. When this is done consciously, it is called programming. Information or commands are stored in the molecular structure of the quartz crystal as magnetic charged data. Thoughts are energy, and they are magnetic in form. All data in programmed crystals are stored as thought form.

First determine the purpose of the program. Then think of the end result you would have if the program worked. Place the crystal against your third eye. The direction the crystal is pointing doesn't matter. Close your eyes and go inside your crystal. Picture the end result happening inside your crystal. Create it with as many of your senses as you can. See it, smell it, touch it, hear it and taste it, make it real. Call upon the Ascended Master Melchizedek to join you and help with the program. When it feels real, come out of your crystal and open your eyes. It is so!

The Ascended Master Melchizedek is part of the regulating program that balances and harmonizes all energies. It only makes sense to ask him to join you in harmonizing and programming your crystal.
